Madison, Wis., July 29.—The annual report of insurance Commissioner Host on fire and marine insurance in Wisconsin, just issued, shows that the total expense of the department for 1902 was $22,464.14, of which $12,020 went for salaries, and $10,444.14 for expenses, including postage, express, telegraph, telephone, printing and stationery. The total receipts of the department were $468,177.29, of which $417,783.39 came from taxes, and $50,393.90 from all other fees.

SCORES "Wild Cats"

The commissioner scores the "wild cat" insurance business in his report and says: "With chapter 394, laws of 1903, in force, there is no excuse for placing insurance in unauthorized companies. Such illegitimate practices can be abolished completely, I believe, if authorized agents will co-operate with the department of insurance, by informing the department of each instance where they bear of the placing of unauthorized insurance, or receive circular letters or literature from wild cat insurance companies."

The report shows 150 fire and marine companies, doing business in the state, a decrease of one since Dec. 31, 1901. They are classified as follows: Wisconsin stock companies, 5; Wisconsin mutual companies, 99; stock companies of other states, 38; mutual companies of other states, 38. The amount of business written in Wisconsin by stock and mutual fire and marine insurance companies during the year 1902 was $414,762,277.40, for which $5,989,788.81 was received as premiums, and upon which $2,270,833.42 was paid for losses, making the ratio of losses paid to premiums received 37.84 per cent.

TO DEAL DIRECT WITH RUSSIANS

Japanese Press Says Time for Considering China Is Now Past.

Victoria B. C., July 29.—Advices received yesterday by the steamer Tosa Maru from the Orient say the Japanese press is maintaining a most resolute stand on the Manchurian question. The general opinion is that the time has gone by for warnings to China or reference to Chinese statesmen. As the Japanese Times optimizes it:
"The diplomatic situation with regard to Manchuria has passed the stage where questions of China's moral courage or cowardice are of any importance. The only possible way to permanently settle the trouble is to discuss the matter frankly with Russia, and there may be war, or may be peace, but either way the settlement will be definite."

From Seoul comes news of increasing activity of Russians on the Korean side of the Yalu river and protests are being made by Korea, but Russia shows supreme indifference. Meanwhile the Japanese are hurrying into the field and are active in seeking timber concessions.

LUCKY BALDWIN STARTS PERSONAL LIBERTY TOWN

Noted Californian Is Said to Plan a
Winter Resort That Will Rival
Monte Carlo.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 29.—E. J. Baldwin, generally known as "Lucky," has carried out his plan of incorporating Arcadia, a municipality of the sixth class, on his big ranch in San Gabriel valley. Temperance and church people declare he intends to establish a Monte Carlo within half an hour's ride of Los Angeles, and Baldwin himself tells a story which apparently gives them reason for this belief.

The election has been held, and to keep the control of his "city" entirely in his own hands, Baldwin had himself elected mayor, while his associate councilmen are H. A. Unrup, Baldwin's superintendent; E. Lawrence, his head clerk; Hull McLaughrey, his boss horse trainer, and David S. Unrup, his winemaker. The newly elected clerk is J. P. Tavillier, who is head gardener for Baldwin, and the marshal is Elmer Anderson, the horse shoer in the Baldwin stable.

"I am going to have a city where there is personal liberty," said Baldwin. "I'll show folks what a beautiful spot there will be here in a few days. We are going to have the finest winter resort racetrack in America and the most elegant clubhouse and hotels. There is no end of money here. I believe we will have another Saratoga some day."

Barbers Necessary.

According to a Dublin scientist, who has spent considerable time in making the necessary calculations, a man's beard grows on an average about three millimetres a week. Warship May Be Sent to Honduras
To Protect the Railway
Bondholders.

Tegucigalpa, July 29.—Mr. Valentino, representing the New York syndicate to whom the Honduras railroad was under lease until seized recently by the government, has left Tegucigalpa and gone to San Pedro. While it is not known what arrangements he has made with the government, his visit is understood to have been satisfactory to him.

The British interests, however, are not so well satisfied as Mr. Valentino seems to be while here. A foreigner who reached here said that Mr. Balne, the British consul at Port Cortez, was greatly dissatisfied with the situation and intended going at once to Guatemala City to report to the British minister, and it was believed he would urge that a British man-of-war be sent at once to Port Cortez to protect the interests of the British bondholders.

The people of Port Cortez look upon Balne's journey to Guatemala City as a virtual assurance that a British warship will soon enter the harbor.

Result in Arrest of Fourteen Persons.

St. Louis, Mo., July 29.—The arrest of Henry A. Bradford of the St. Louis Commercial Grain and Stock Company, with offices at room 706 Burlington building, by postoffice inspectors is thought by Chief Inspector Dice to mark the final collapse of one of the most gigantic land swindles in the history of the country.

The charge against Bradford is using the mails in a scheme to defraud. His bond was fixed at $2,000 which has not been forthcoming. He was placed in the charge of Chief Deputy United States Marshal Watson.

The arrest of Bradford, according to Inspector Dice, is the result of an investigation of land title swindles that have been traced from the inspector's office since December, 1902, resulting in the arrest of fourteen of the accused parties. The investigation has taken the office into the states of Colorado, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Texas, Kansas, Kentucky, Tennessee, West Virginia, and North Carolina.

BURNING OF THE CITY OF CHICAGO

Fireworks Set Off on Roofs Will Give Mimic Portrayal of Terrible Calamity.

Chicago's Centennial jubilee, to be given this fall, is beginning to attract attention throughout the western states. From September 26 to October 1, the city will be the scene of a series of municipal fetes such as have been equaled only in the days of the Romans.

Two of the most popular features on the program will be the military parade for President Roosevelt, and a vivid reproduction of the burning of Chicago.

The parade will include United States troops from the forts of the west, the state militia, crack regiments from different parts of the country, and other uniformed organizations.

In the mimic conflagration five hundred tons of Roman fire will be ignited simultaneously on the tops of the taller buildings within the area burned by the great fire of 1871. The skyscrapers will be especial vantage grounds for the display, and from the DeKoven street home of the famous Mrs. O'Leary, where the great fire started, there will be a big flight of bombs.

In one of the parks there will be a reproduction of Fort Dearborn, built in 1893. This was the first white man's building in the city, and it is to commemorate its construction that the jubilee is held. Four hundred Indians, descendants of the tribes that once lived in Chicago, will hold camp about the fort and will make a daily attack on it. The structure also will be the scene of a reunion of the scattered pioneers of the city.

An industrial parade at night, brilliantly illuminated and containing many handsome floats, will be another spectacle. There also will be superb fireworks, automobile races, swimming races and water polo contests in which the participants will be the famous athletes of the country, yachting races in which the crack boats of the lakes will fight for valuable cups, and many other open-air events to which all Chicago and the surrounding country will be bidden.

The mayor's committee, having the jubilee in charge, will raise more than $100,000. The railroads have pledged favorable rates, and the promise is made that Chicago will have more than five hundred thousand visitors.

Information regarding the Centennial can be secured from C. R. Macdon, Sec'y, Great Northern hotel.

SURVIVORS MADE PLEDGE TO ACT

Natives of Ober-Ammergau Promised to Portray Scenes of Christ's Life.

Some of the views of the Passion Play that are shown at the ball park every evening this week are: Scenes in the village of Ober-Ammergau; Shepherds watching their flocks; Presentation in the temple; The flight into Egypt; Palace of King Herod; Salome's dance; Brook of Cedron; Entry into Jerusalem; Christ blessing little children; Raising of Lazarus; The Last Supper; Betrayed; The Jews before Pilate; Trial and Condemnation of Jesus; Carrying the Cross; Crucifixion; Taken down from the cross; Resurrection; Ascension.

At the first part of the lecture, a brief history of the play and of the town where it is held is given. The following is a brief outline of its origin:

As early as the thirteenth century some drama of the life of Christ, was performed at Ober-Ammergau; but it became an established institution of the place two hundred and fifty years ago. At that time a plague was raging in Bavaria. In Ober-Ammergau alone nearly one hundred people perished.

Made a Vow. Accordingly, the terrified survivors made a vow that if the town was spared all further ravages of the disease, they would, therefore, every ten years, portray in a dramatic form, for the instruction of mankind, the story of Christ's life and suffering. Apparently this vow was heard, for the plague at once abated, and ever since the villagers of Ober-Ammergau have felt it to be both a duty and privilege to carry out the promises of their ancestors, bequeathing it from generation to generation as a sacred obligation.

Visitors from All the Earth. During the summer months of the decennial periods, when the play is given, it is witnessed every Sunday and almost every Monday by a multitude of visitors, approximating in all a quarter of a million people, who from all corners of the earth make their way, often at severe personal inconvenience up the steep mountain of the Tyrol, purposely to see this wonderful drama.

FOREST CITY TAKES MATCH

BOWER CITY GOLFERS ARE UP AGAINST IT.

STRANGE LINKS 100 MUCH

Janesville Golfers Foot Up a Total of Ten—Are Royally Entertained.

History repeated itself at Rockford yesterday. In last year's home and home series between the Janesville and Rockford Country clubs, the Bower City match was an overwhelming defeat for Rockford, the Illinois match the reverse. This year, ditto. When the carls were in and the arithmeticians had finished their work, the margin lacked just one of being fifty in favor of the Illinoisans. The columns figured fifty-nine against a measly ten for Janesville.

Splendid Entertainment Offered. And yet it is doubtful if the regret of the golfers whose love of golf sport was given a body blow by the score was not overbalanced by their thorough enjoyment of the kindly entertainment which their victors furnished. The Rockfordites made good in their intention to "get back at you for the good time you gave us." Plans had been made to hold the car until ten o'clock, up to which time a dance at the clubhouse helped to restore the feelings of the vanquished to equanimity.

Links Very Speedy. A sunbaked course was presented for the match. The ground was burned hard as a rock and a ball would bound almost as though from a pavement. The putting greens were almost shorn of grass and frightfully rapid. The entire course was so fast as to disconcert the Janesville players, accustomed to clover greens. Besides this, the made bunkers proved strictly closed to almost every player. The "chocolate drop" mounds demoralized a number of pretty flights.

Overwhelmingly Defeated. Only four of the locals, J. P. Baker, H. S. McGinn, George Baumann, and Mark Bostwick, finished up; Charles Schaller, Charles E. Dunn, and R. W. Hill held their opponents even; the remaining men of the twenty-one-man team finished down from one to eleven.

Following is the individual score, Janesville's representative appearing first in each instance:

Leo Brownell defeated by Frank Keeler two down.

F. J. Baker defeated by Earl Kelley three down.

Chas. Schaller played Lee Stewart all even.

J. P. Baker defeated E. J. McCredie one up.

O. Sutherland defeated by R. H. Shumway two down.

C. C. MacLean defeated by B. B. Treat one down.

H. S. McGinn defeated Fred Tittle six up.

H. H. McKinney defeated by Forbes Talcott three down.

C. E. Dunn played N. Kelley all even.

George Baumann defeated George Forbes one up.

H. G. Carter defeated by A. Haines one down.

H. Goldin defeated by S. V. Saxby three down.

Mark Bostwick defeated F. F. Nelson two up.

H. H. Bliss defeated by Bert Crawford five down.

Wilson Lane defeated by Joe Beale eleven down.

H. W. McNamara defeated by E. D. Parker five down.

E. H. Peterson defeated by J. Stanley Browne six down.

Fred Schaller defeated by A. T. Barnes seven down.

A. G. Galbraith defeated by C. H. Hemming five down.

R. W. Hill played Fred Haines all even.

Chester Morse defeated by A. Gilruth six down.

Total: Janesville, 10; Rockford, 59.

Ladies' Putting Match. Miss Wilma McGinn entered an impromptu putting match which was played in the afternoon, and succeeded in winning honors equal to those which she had captured on the home links, taking the first prize in the contest.

STATE TOURNEY TOMORROW

Leo Brownell to Represent the Janesville Golf Club.

The Wisconsin Golf association annual tournament will begin tomorrow over the links of the Racine Golf club. It is well known that the links of the Racine Golf club is among the finest as well as one of the most difficult to play on of any in the state or west. Long grass skirts the edge of the fair green, and when the ball is driven into it, the loss of one stroke and often two is the penalty. Hazards, natural and artificial, abound and together with the narrowness of the course, a drive with but a little slice or hook is almost certain to earn a penalty. Leo Brownell will alone represent the Janesville club in the tourney.

The Wisconsin Golf association was organized in Janesville in 1901, and the first tournament held on the links of the Janesville Country club that year, was won by Hamilton Voss of the Milwaukee Country club. Last year the golfers of the state played on the links of the local club on the Whitelash bay road, Fred Pettit carrying off the honors after fighting his way down to the final and disposing of a number of veterans. His match with Stephen Bull in the closing round was the most stubbornly contested of any in the tournament and rivaled any open championship in interest and display of nerve by the youthful contestants. The association now has eleven members, golf clubs in the following Wisconsin cities: Milwaukee, Madison, Oshkosh, Kenosha, Racine, Green Lake, La Crosse, Mineral Point, Appleton, Janesville and Marinette, all of which will be represented at Racine in the tournament this week. Hamilton Voss of Milwaukee is president, and Dr. L. E. Hall of Racine, secretary and treasurer.

Janesville in Association. The Racine Golf club which will be the host during the last three days of the week, is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, golf club in the state, having been organized in 1896. A few of the early enthusiasts laid out links on the famous Case farm, south of the Belle city, and later the club was incorporated and a lease taken upon the present grounds. The club not only ranks high among the golf fraternities of the country, but is the largest and strongest social organization in Racine.

Entries Falling. In the first of the tourneys, held in this city, Janesville's entry was large, and in the second five men up-held the Janesville laurels. They were Messrs. J. P. Baker, H. S. McGinn, Leo Brownell, H. W. McNamara and Al Schaller. Schaller won the consolation cup, and Brownell was runner-up in the same event.

The indications are that the third tournament of the association will be the best that has yet been held. The pick of the talent in the Badger state will be on hand to try issues for the championship, and amateur records for the Belle City are likely to be lowered.

Elaborate arrangements are being made by the Racine people to suitably entertain the visitors, of whom 300 are looked for, and a royal time is anticipated by them. In former years the tournaments have always been occasions for dinners and dances galore, but the one this week promises to eclipse them all in that respect.

A Fast Course. Everything has been done by Racine golfers to put the sporty course in the best possible shape and Dr. L. E. Hall, chairman of the sports and course committee, said yesterday that the fair greens are in fine condition and the putting greens perfect. New tees were raised for each hole last spring and the second, fourth, and seventh holes lengthened, until the course is now 3,073 yards long.

No less than five handsome silver cups are offered for play. The winner of the tournament becomes the holder of a beautiful trophy which is the perpetual property of the association, and the owner of a gold medal suitably engraved. The runner up in the first flight wins a silver loving cup, and the winner and runner up in the second flight each will be presented with suitable trophies. A fifth cup is offered for the best medal score for 18 holes made in the qualifying round.

State Champion Fred Pettit of Kenosha will defend his title, but it is feared with indifferent success, unless his game has improved since the Kenosha team played in the Marshall field competition.

In the qualifying round of 18 holes the first 16 will qualify for the Wisconsin state championship cup and the second sixteen for the consolation cup. A prize is offered for the runner up in both events, and there is also a prize for the highest qualifying score.

Running Races at Beloit, July 31st and August 1st. The Beloit Jockey club have 40 entries in all classes and new entries are arriving daily.

TRAVELING IN LUZON

AMERICAN DESCRIBES JOURNEY TO VOLCANO.

Primitive Mode of Conveyance That Seemed Designed to Produce Discomfort—Some Peculiar Habits of the Native Filipinos.

(Special Correspondence.)

The provinces of Rizal and Laguna are more disaffected than any others in the island of Luzon and have been filled with ladrone bands, which still exist in a scattered condition. The route to the volcano, Taal, lies through these provinces. There is a line of steam launches—boats perhaps ninety feet in length—owned and managed by Filipinos, which takes the traveler part of the distance from Manila to Taal, passing through the whole length of the River Pasig and through the lake from which the district of Laguna takes its name.

Along the river is a continuous line of native villages, the inhabitants being engaged in fishing and farming. As fishermen their methods are unique. Some of the men just wade out till their heads only are out of water and then, taking a long breath, they go below and actually catch fish with their hands. This may appear to be incredible, but we saw it—saw them actually come up with the fish: it is true that their catch was made only once out of a dozen dives, but they got there at times. Others use nets, wading in the river and holding the net, which is a sort of trap mounted on bamboo sticks, in front of them as they walk along the river bed. The fish are plentiful, or their methods would have poor results. She women do most of the farming.

The road from Calamba to Ambulan, the village nearest the volcano, was a native road. The ride was a wild dream, or, rather, nightmare. The vehicle, drawn by two native ponies, was the complete and perfect work of the evil one. It rattled, jolted and threatened to go to pieces. The seat of the vehicle was of hardwood; the makers had not considered the possibility of their containing anyone larger than a Filipino and the head of a fairly tall American just touched the roof. Every time the cart struck a stone the American's head struck the roof and as this road was all stones the tops of our heads were pretty well mashed by the time the lake was reached. Then there was a mean contrivance placed on the back of the seat; it was intended to represent a back rest, but it was of hardwood, with the sharp side out, and so placed that it just caught the back of an American in a place where the bone is most prominent. The misery of that ride will never be forgotten.

The end of this ride brought us to the lake—Bombon or Taal lake—which is about ten miles long and seven or eight wide. The volcano is on an island in the center of the lake and is reached by dugout boats, with outriggers of bamboo to steady them. The natives here were very poor and some of them told me how much they regretted the departure of the soldiers who were stationed there some time ago. In the first place, the soldiers spent money there and money is as scarce with them as with any community I know of. And in the second place, we found that the soldiers had become personally popular with the people.

The volcano is not a particularly impressive mountain from a distance, there being several other mountains within sight of three times its height. The ascent is easy, over a bed of cinders, and can be made by an athletic person without once stopping to rest. The crater is about a mile across and can be entered by a gap broken in the vertical wall near the top. Inside the wall drops about 100 feet straight down, but below this there is a long slope of cinders, at an angle of about thirty degrees from the vertical, which may be descended by making diagonal tracks across its face. At the bottom of the crater is a small central crater, from which issues a roaring jet of steam, from a vent hole about fifteen feet across. There are other steam vents, but this one is the largest. The steam is impregnated with sulphur dioxide and very unpleasant. In the southeast corner are a number of the steam jets, which have deposited, on the cinders around them, an incrustation of borax, but not, I think, in quantities worth working.

The last eruption of any consequence was in the eighteenth century, but there is evidence of a comparatively recent eruption on a small scale. Over the whole of the interior of the crater and to some extent on the outside, is a deposit several inches thick of brown volcanic dust, which has a crust of about a quarter of an inch thick, due to the action of the rain.

After leaving the volcano the mad ride recommenced. We had passed over the road the first time in the middle of the night, but the return trip was made by day. All along the road the native population was strung out to see the caravan of Americans, and they certainly saluted us in the most friendly way.

At Calamba we were lucky enough to hire a Filipino house for the night. At least we had all we wanted of it, the family using the room that we did not occupy. There was one large room, divided by a wardrobe into two sections. The floor was of strips of bamboo, one inch wide, with spaces of a quarter of an inch between them.

The furniture consisted of two bamboo benches and a stand two feet by eighteen inches and three feet high. The floor served for bed, dining table and washstand. In fact, everyone squatted in real Asiatic fashion. In this town there was a Chinese restaurant, with a Chinaman who spoke English. He had a printed bill of fare, in English, which quoted prices for oysters, pork chops, beefsteak and other things. We asked what he actually had on hand, and it appeared that he had fried chicken and eggs. We ordered the whole bill of fare and after a short time we heard loud squawking in the kitchen, and then the Chinaman stuck a beaming face into the room, saying: "Can do mucho chucky squawk, mucho chucky fry, can do!" He was just killing the chickens, after going around the neighborhood to find them.

After eating we were ready for sleep. We went to our house to find all the women of the house waiting to put us to bed. It seems to be the correct thing to put a guest safely to bed, and there they were waiting for us to undress and to put the pillows under our heads and cover us up. The floor was covered with pieces of matting and all the cushions in the house laid for us to sleep on; and as one of the cushions was a little soiled the lady of the house got out from the wardrobe her own white petticoat and wrapped it around the cushion for a pillow case. Lying awake after the house was quiet I heard a faint squalling, and, peeping out, I saw the whole family going to bed on the other part of the floor, back of the wardrobe that formed a partial partition between us and the rear of the house.

Before leaving the subject of the Filipino houses in their villages I should say they have in many of these villages a stream of water running along the side of the road, in front of the houses, and two or three stone steps leading down to the water in front of each house. In the early morning the women put on their bathing dresses and take their little ones down to this stream to wash. The stream is also used to wash clothing. I am not sure whether they all drink the water, but I know some of them do so.

One on "Sam" Bowles.

Although the anti-expansion sentiments of Samuel Bowles, the editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican, are generally well known and his paper is called the organ of the anti-imperialists, an estimable gentleman who recently settled in the city took so little interest in national affairs that he knew nothing of these things. At a meeting of the citizens of the city to determine what should be done to celebrate the Fourth of July, this estimable gentleman arose and seriously proposed "that one of our leading citizens, Samuel Bowles, be asked to read the Declaration of Independence in some public place on that day, when every man wants to show his loyalty to this country."

The many old Springfield residents present roared with laughter, and after the meeting one of them took the estimable gentleman to one side and quietly explained to him the "awful break" that had caused the hilarity.—New York Times.

City's Internal Traffic.

In New York city last year the surface and elevated lines carried about twice as many passengers as were carried by all the steam railways of the United States combined. The number of passengers in New York was above 1,200,000,000, of whom the surface railways carried about 80 per cent. Last year the people of New York paid out for rides upon the surface and elevated lines the sum of $49,000,000, or about one-eighth the gross passenger earnings of all the steam railways in the country.

Value of Bee Stings.

In view of the fact that a Vienna physician has become famous for curing rheumatism by the external application of bee stings, an American physician rises to say that the internal absorption of the virus of the honey bee has affected 500 times 500 cures.

Race Track Employees at Decatur Battle Near a Winery.

Decatur, Ill., July 29.—William Swygart, aged 55 years, was murdered by William Cummings, aged 19 years, in a lunch room adjoining Whittington's saloon. His throat was cut. Cummings escaped. The police are attempting to find Lily Bancroft, the only witness to the affray. She was in a winery, into which Swygart staggered, saying: "My God, the kid has killed me." Swygart and Cummings were employed on the Decatur race track. They were friendly in the early part of the night.

WHY THEY PUSH IT

Peoples Drug Co. Recommend and Push Mi-na, the True Flesh-Forming Food.

"It is a pleasure to sell a medicine when their customers come in after it and tell them how much good it has done them," said Peoples Drug Co. the enterprising druggists to a Gazette man, "and that is why they like to sell and recommend Mi-na, the flesh-forming food and cure for stomach troubles."

They started its sale in Janesville by giving a signed guarantee bond, with every purchase to the effect that if Mi-na did not cure indigestion, and all stomach troubles and build up good, sound, healthy flesh, they would return the money. This caused a lot of talk and so many people were impressed by this offer that the clerks have been busy selling Mi-na ever since.

They have so much faith in this preparation, that they are going to guarantee it, and will return the money to any purchaser of Mi-na who tells them that its use has not caused a gain in flesh or who has been troubled with indigestion since using it.

"Anyone who is thin, weak and under weight or has any digestive troubles whatever, is invited to leave 50c on deposit at their store and take home a box of Mi-na with the understanding that if it does not increase the weight, regulate digestion, and cure dyspepsia, the money can be withdrawn on demand without any questions."

We do not know but what we would be willing to pay interest on the deposit.

Peoples Drug Co. have tried to make their guarantee as plain and simple as possible. Every one who is annoyed by thinness, who is troubled with indigestion, or who feels weak and run-down, should take advantage of this guarantee offer on Mi-na, as we are willing to assume all the risk and pay for the medicine ourselves if it does not cure.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Probable local thunder storms; slightly cooler.

WHO ARE THE PEOPLE?

We hear a great deal from the corporation bailing press and speakers about the "people" how they and not the corporations rule; and by corporations it is fair to assume that they mean all manufacturing firms. Popularly speaking the "people" means the farmers for it is to them that the time-worn appeals are made by the adherents and exponents of populist doctrine. There are a few figures from the Blue Book of 1903 may be found interesting.

According to the statistics therein found there were in Wisconsin in 1900 169,735 farms, owned, rented, or managed by an equal number of people; there were also 16,187 manufacturing plants in the state, owned by 17,247 people, and giving employment to 152,836 people, a total of 170,083 being interested in that line of work. The total value of farm property was $311,712,319, of manufacturing plants, $330,568,779 the farm products, in 1900 amounted to $157,445,719, the manufactured products $360,818,942, amount paid to labor on farms: $10,468,610; in manufacturing plants, $69,015,980. The figures given in the manufacturing do not include the railway companies, either steam or electric, insurance companies, or general mercantile business.

Who, then, are the "People?" Are they only the farming class, are they only those engaged in manufacture, or business, or ought the term to include everyone who lives in this grand old state of ours, irrespective of their vocations, so long as they are honest? Isn't the effort therefore, to array the agricultural class against the manufacturing class, and to call the latter thieves, robbers, and usurers, entirely out of place, and should it not be frowned upon? Is a man a robber when he employs men to work in a factory, and an honest man when he employs them on the farm? What is the difference, and why?

The manufacturers of this state, the railroad men, the bankers, the business men are equally as interested in the welfare of the state, as are the farmers, for if prosperity comes to one class; it must necessarily come to all; no man can make money without men getting a share of it, and no man meets with a monetary loss that it does not affect, directly or indirectly, everyone else, and those near him feel the gain or loss before those who are far away. For instance, a failure in the potato crop in this county would affect the people in this immediate vicinity a great deal more than it would those in Chicago, and much more quickly, and the same is true of a year of big crops and high prices.

And when demagogic campaign orators seek to gain votes by appealing to the farmers as the poor men the farmers ought to stop and think of the eight hundred millions their farms are worth; of the absolute certainty, in Wisconsin that their farms will produce enough not only for the sustenance of themselves, and their families, but also enough to lay by snug sums for the inevitable rainy days; let them think of the business men particularly in the smaller towns and villages who depend on the farmers for their living, think of the thousands of toilers in the great cities who look to the farmers of Wisconsin for their daily food, and then defiantly hurl back into the teeth of the agitators who seek to boost themselves by dragging other people down, the accusation that they are poor, down trodden and oppressed.

All such assertions are the merest clapnet intended to fool the people given forth in the expectation that those who hear them are not thinkers, but will swallow them whole because the man who tells them has some reputation as a politician, The man who talks such trash is a dangerous man for he does not tell the truth.—Waupeca Post.

THE AMAZON

Mr. Blaine, in the great foresight which called together, the Pan-American Congress in 1890 put Henry G. Davis and Andrew Carnegie on the Committee for an International Railway between the Arctic and the Antarctic circles. Mr. Carnegie at that time expressed the interest which he has never lost in this oceanic railway to run north and south. They appointed a commission of engineers to survey the south for this railway. This commission divided its work into eight engineering bodies. It took five years in making the surveys, and completed them, I think, in the year 1895. Fortunately for the world, at the head of those engineering commissions was the head of the Pennsylvania Railroad today, Mr. Alexander Cassatt.

When I speak of the subject, everybody laughs. Then I say that Mr. Bates, the great English botanist, after residing eight years in the valley of the Amazon, said: "Although humanity can reach an advanced state of culture only by battling with the inclemencies of nature in high latitudes, it is under the equator alone that the perfect race of the future will attain to complete fruition of man's beautiful heritage, the earth." Everybody laughs at him. They say that it is a place for monkeys and butterflies, but not for men.

But I like to remind you of what Robert Livingston said 100 years ago in writing a letter to President Jefferson. He said: "I have told them all that we shall not send an emigrant across the Mississippi in the next 100 years." If anyone had foretold then the great population which the next hundred years would see in the valley of the Mississippi, he would have been called a crank. And that is what you will say of me when I tell you that the completion of the railway between the North and the South, and the populating of the valley of the Amazon, and making the people of North America acquainted with the people of South America, will be the result of the work of the next hundred years.

See what Mr. Agassiz said of the valley of the Amazon in his letter 1865: "The basin of the Amazon is another Mississippi, having a tropical climate, tempered by moisture. There is room for a hundred million happy human beings."

BATTERIES 21 AND 14 OF FORT SHERIDAN ARRIVE.

MARCHING TO CAMP DOUGLAS

Two Men Deserted, Last Night—Go to Leyden Tonight—Thirteen Days on the March.

For a brief fifteen minutes this morning the streets were in martial array. A battalion of field artillery, consisting of the 21st and 14th batteries, U. S. A., passed through the city en route from Fort Sheridan to Camp Douglas.

Two hundred men and two hundred and fifty horses made up the long cavalcade. Six guns and six caissons made up the field equipment of each battery. A wagon train of nine wagons brought up the rear. Each battery was accompanied by an ambulance wagon, bearing the red cross upon the side.

Clad in Khaki With the exception of the officers the men were clad in campaign uniform—khaki trousers, leggings, service shirts, and slouch hats, the red band on the hat denoting the branch of the service. The men of rank wore khaki coats. Most of the men in the 21st, which was the first battery to arrive in the city, wore the new brown shirts, while the men of the 14th wore the blue. The 14th is just returned from the Philippines where they have seen active service, while the 21st has never left Fort Sheridan save on such peaceful errands as the present.

Their Commanding Officers Capt. Newcomb was in command of the battalion. He is an old West Point friend of Victor P. Richardson, and this morning was their first meeting since their days at the great military training school. Capt. Berry commanded the 21st and Lieut. Smith the 14th.

Thirteen Days' March The battalion will arrive at Camp Douglas the 6th of August, having occupied thirteen days on the road, including Sundays. The distance to be covered is one hundred and eighty miles, and about twenty miles a day is travelled. The entire route with all stopping places was mapped out before leaving Fort Sheridan, the camping places being selected with a view of securing water. Last night's stop was Shopiere and tonight's Leyden. The cars of forage for the horses and rations for the men are sidetracked at each stopping place.

Lieut. Frowitt is making a map of the route. He rides beside the battery wagon of the 14th, upon the wheel of which is attached an odometer. This gives him the distances and a compass the direction. He writes upon a long roll of paper which is connected with two rollers at the ends of a small board, the paper being rolled along as fast as the march progresses. By this means he can make his route map while on horseback.

Had Two Deserters Two men deserted from the 14th battery at Shopiere last evening. It is not known in which direction they went, but the police along the way are being notified to be on the lookout. One private was under guard today for breach of discipline. He marched directly in advance of four men on horseback and his face was a study.

The halt in this city was made on South Main street, the battalion extending from Milwaukee street to a point near the Lewis factory. For nearly fifteen minutes the horses were given a rest, while the men made slight purchases and talked with bystanders.

A Motley Throng The appearance of the streets was more decidedly altered by the presence of Cossacks and cowboys from the Wild West show. The Cossacks took especial interest, petting the horses with great fondness.

With the exception of several of the teams in the wagon train every horse was a bay of the regulation description, branded on the shoulder with Uncle Sam's initials. Of the wagon teams a few were contract teams, and were driven by the owners, a soldier being detailed to each wagon to guard the government property.

After three weeks at Camp Douglas the return march will begin.

NEGRO'S VICTIM IS LAID TO REST

SERMON IS ON RACE HATRED

Minister Blames Intemperance for Crime That Led to Lynching and Says Mob Was Composed of Men Who Had Been Drinking.

Danville, Ill., July 29.—Henry Gatterman, whose murder caused the Danville lynching, had the largest funeral ever held in Danville. The cortege, headed by a band, went miles out of its way to parade the principal streets. Concerning the crime of Saturday night, Rev. A. M. Wells, who preached the funeral sermon, said: "The dreadful circumstances surrounding the death of this man suggest the fact, that there are, among others, three great evils existing in our land that need mastering by a strong hand or they will one day crush us as a people into the dust. First is intemperance. The start of all the trouble was the fact that the negro had been drinking. The mob at the jail was for the most part made up of young men who spend their time about saloons."

Race Hatred and Mob Law. "Second is race hatred. It was not because of the awfulness of the crime that the colored man was lynched, but because his skin was black. There is no race war in Danville, but the facts show that there is a strong hatred between races."

"Third is mob law. I know that the crimes which incite our people to these unlawful executions are most black and revolting. I know that the law moves slowly and that justice is too long delayed, but these facts are no warrant for a reign of mobocracy for a single day or a single hour. Our laws are strong and we have the officials to execute them. The blow of the riot Saturday night struck not only the murderer, but it strikes all our republican institutions and at the protection and welfare of all our people."

Troops Remain on Guard. After services at the church the remains were borne to the Spring Hill cemetery, where they were laid to rest. There was much excitement in the city over an alleged murder of a white man by a negro at Westville, six miles south of here, but the report proved to be an exaggeration of a free fight between four foreign miners. Two troops of the Seventh regiment of Chicago are still here, and unless some entirely new and unexpected fight between a negro and white man occurs the authorities will have no difficulty in preserving order.

Has Faith in Officials. Attorney General Hamlin has requested Adjutant General Scott not to remove the remaining companies of the Seventh regiment from Danville for the present. Mr. Hamlin has been in conference over the telephone with the state's attorney of Vermillion county, and it is believed that the troops are wanted there until the arrest of the mob leaders can be effected.

General Hamlin is satisfied that the sheriff and state's attorney are sincere in their statements that they will prosecute vigorously all who were concerned in the rioting. Adjutant General Scott said that the remaining troops will not be ordered away from Danville until it is certain that the trouble is over.

HUNT FOR CULPRIT WITH DOGS

Indiana Posse Follows Trail to Small Railway Station.

Logansport, Ind., July 29.—Sheriff Richardson and a posse of about a hundred angry citizens of Washington township, armed with shotguns, revolvers and pitchforks, followed two bloodhounds for eight miles in an effort to find the unknown assailant of Mrs. Joseph Watts. The chase ended at Boone, a small station along the Panhandle, where was found a revolver believed to belong to the man. It is thought that he got a train at this station.

WARNS HUNGARIANS TO LEAVE

Committee Notifies Antioch (Ind.) Foreigners to Depart.

Linton, Ind., July 29.—At Antioch, a mining camp near this city, notices were found that had been posted warning all Hungarians who are employed at the work to leave the camp within twenty-four hours. The notices were signed "Committee" and were of a threatening nature and Mine Superintendent Holbert advised the foreigners to remain and come to this city for official protection. No attempt has been made to carry out the threat, but an outbreak is expected. Negroes recently were forced to leave here, but this is the first attempt to intimidate foreigners. The Hungarians are members of the United Mine-workers' union and no reason is given why their presence is undesirable. The Antioch mines are owned by a Chicago company, of which L. T. Dickason of the Monon railway is president.

BELIEVE PASTOR IS A LUNATIC

Illinois Officials Lock Up Rev. Benjamin Wiseman for Inquiry.

Springfield, Ill., July 29.—Rev. Benjamin Wiseman, who has held a number of important pastoral charges in Illinois and at Kansas City, Mo., was brought here by Pawnee officials and locked up in the county jail. An inquiry into his sanity will be held in the county court. Wiseman left his home at Zenobia while laboring under the delusion that God had directed him to deliver a spiritual message to save a sinner. He walked twenty miles before being taken into custody. Wiseman is a fine-looking man and talks rationally on all subjects except religion. He has held pastorates at Girard, Roodhouse, Morrisonville and other points in Illinois. He is employed by a theological publishing house of Kansas City.

Wasted Valor at Port Hudson

A FORTIETH
WAR STORY
May 27, 1863

(Copyright, 1903, by G. L. Kilmer.)

MAY 27, 1863, turned out a red day in the history of Banks' Army of the Gulf. After looking the ground over for some days and reaching the conclusion that the task was hopeless the troops were sent forward to storm the Confederate works at Port Hudson, on the Mississippi. The plan called for a grand simultaneous assault by four divisions, but when the hour came the left column, led by General Thomas W. Sherman, had not formed its lines. Banks rode to Sherman's bivouac in a high temper and found Sherman calmly taking lunch with his officers. Hot words followed, and Banks rode back to headquarters, sending his chief of staff to the front to supersede the dilatory commander.

When the officer reached Sherman's line, the troops were already in motion, and he wisely let well enough alone. The division moved in in column of two brigades, with an interval in the center. Sherman, in full dress, attended by his staff and escort superbly mounted and equipped, galloped forward at the blast of the trumpet and closed the interval. Then the line marched out from a screen of trees and dashed for the enemy's ramparts.

In front of the column were four fences, and before these obstructions had been removed the Confederates opened fire upon the assailants. Not satisfied with ordinary missiles, the gunners loaded some heavy naval guns mounted upon the works with broken railway bars, chains and rusty scrap iron. In spite of the terrible fusillade Sherman's line charged up to the abatis, which, being formed of dry trees with pointed limbs, had caught fire from the shells. The brave fellows who attempted to mount the huge trunks or cut away the branches to open a path were brought down by bullets fired at close range from the parapet.

Sherman rode unseathed through the storm until his horse was stopped by the abatis, although a hot fire was directed upon him and the mounted officers in his train. Reaching the abatis, he was shot from the saddle, with a shattered leg, and two of his staff went down at the same time. The second in command, General Neal Dow, having also fallen, Banks' staff officer took command of the division and saved the indomitable soldiers from useless annihilation by ordering a retreat.

When the sound of Sherman's guns was heard on the left, Banks ordered the center column under General Au-the west. Rosecrans counted upon help from Grant's army, which had conquered Vicksburg. But Grant had other plans.

Rosecrans' march upon Chattanooga from the west left one weak point in the campaign plan. The upper Tennessee valley from Chattanooga northward to Knoxville, guarded on the west by the Cumberland mountains, was still open to the Confederates. This valley connected Chattanooga with Virginia and Bragg's army with the army of Robert E. Lee. Moreover it gave Bragg an open road to Kentucky if he chose to offset Rosecrans' march southward by a second invasion across the Ohio. Bragg had maintained a strong division at Knoxville under Buckner to keep the road open.

Army movements are sometimes, though not often, surrounded with mystery which completely baffles the keenest leader of the opposition. Bragg knew he was fated to be attacked at Chattanooga or in that vicinity by Rosecrans. He knew he might be attacked also by Grant with the Vicksburg army, either in conjunction with Rosecrans or independent of him. These threatening attacks must come from the west. While watching them the last days in August a new and wholly unlooked for foe took the field in east Tennessee, heading for Knoxville. The new foe was a new Federal army under General Burnside.

Had Burnside's march been revealed to Bragg a few days earlier he might have ignored Rosecrans toiling through the mountains and sent help to Buckner to hold Knoxville, for the possession of that point gave the Confederates railroad connection between Chattanooga and Virginia direct. The news from Knoxville, however, did not reach Chattanooga until Rosecrans had crossed the Tennessee river into Georgia and was heading for Dalton, on the railroad in rear of Chattanooga. Bragg was not to be allowed to fight for Chattanooga from behind the defenses he had built with great care, but must march out and fight in the open, and that not merely to save Chattanooga, but to save his army from ruin. Should Rosecrans plant his army in the passes of the mountains of north Georgia behind Bragg the Confederate would be in a trap. He couldn't feed his army with Tennessee closed to him and Georgia cut off. He couldn't retreat, for mountains hedged him about—mountains and Federal armies.

A little more activity on the part of General Meade, who was confronting Lee in Virginia, and Bragg's army would have been smashed by Rosecrans in the passes of north Georgia or it would have been cooped up in Chattanooga. Help was to come to Bragg in the crisis Rosecrans was weaving kur to charge. The brigade of Colonel Edward P. Chapin, One Hundred and Sixteenth New York, led the division, its front covered by skirmishers of the Twenty-first Maine. In rear of the skirmishers marched a storming column of 200 volunteers, with Lieutenant Colonel O'Brien of the Forty-eighth Massachusetts at their head. The stormers carried in their hands bags of cotton and fascines to fill the ditch in advance of the main column.

Colonel Chapin's own regiment, the One Hundred and Sixteenth New York, held the right of the line, with the Forty-eighth Massachusetts on the left. These were supported by the Forty-ninth Massachusetts, the Second Louisiana and the reserve of the Twenty-first Maine. An eyewitness, Colonel R. B. Irwin of Banks' staff, thus describes Chapin's charge:

"O'Brien shook hands with the officer who brought him the last order, and, turning to his men, who were lying or sitting near by, some on their cotton bags, others on the ground, said in the coolest and most businesslike manner, 'Pick up your bundles and come on.' The movement of the stormers was the signal for the whole line. A truly magnificent sight was the advance of these battalions with their colors flying and borne steadily toward the front, yet not for long."

"Hardly had the movement begun about him from faroff Virginia and that not by the short cut through east Tennessee via Knoxville—for Burnside had closed that route—but the roundabout course of the Carolinas.

Still another combination for the destruction of Bragg and Chattanooga was figured out on paper while Rosecrans was toiling through the mountains the last weeks in August. Grant proposed to take his Vicksburg army south, reduce Mobile and then march north into the interior of Georgia behind Bragg, cutting the Confederacy in two the second time. This plan was overruled in Washington. Had it been begun, even not to say carried through, Chickamauga would never have been fought. In the event of Grant's attacking Mobile Rosecrans would have been given the task of threatening Chattanooga to keep Bragg busy, another case of one army holding the head of the enemy while another skins his legs.

Left to his own devices, Rosecrans pounded Chattanooga with shells and passed his army around it to the rear, compelling Bragg to follow and leave Chattanooga empty. Burnside was too far away to march in, and Grant's army was temporarily broken up.

Fres Theater Tickets.

People in Paris, who are interested in giving working girls a bit of pleasure now and then, have devised a scheme where worthy girls receive two tickets to a good theater once in a while. The scheme calls for an elaborate system of registration, but it is working to perfection. The Kaiser is thinking of introducing the idea into the royal theaters in Germany.

BANKERS DEFEND ASSET CURRENCY

COMMITTEES WILL CO-OPERATE

Congressman Fowler Believes the Wisconsin Convention Will Fall in Line and Help Solve the Question to Satisfaction of All.

Rock Island, Ill., July 29.—At the convention of the Illinois and Iowa bankers, now assembled at Rock Island and Davenport, the delegation from Chicago secured the passage of resolutions that it is believed will aid the Chicago plan for asset currency, that is now being worked out by the committee recently appointed by the president of the Chicago Bankers' club.

The resolution passed was introduced by Cashier Frank Judson of the Bankers' National Bank of Chicago and also secretary of the Illinois Bankers' Association. It is as follows:

To Act in Union.
 "Resolved, That the convention appoint a committee of five members of this association, whose duty shall be to confer with and act in conjunction with a like committee from the Chicago Bankers' club and like committees appointed by the other state bankers' associations, to follow all proposed federal legislation changing the present banking law or affecting banking interests, and take such action relative to the same as may be deemed best."

The committee thus authorized are not yet made up, but it practically has been decided by the executive council, which has the approving power, that they shall include such men as E. J. Parker of Quincy, Phil Mitchell of Rock Island, J. S. Thorp of Cairo and Thomas D. Catlin of Cairo.

Solves the Question.
 Congressman Charles A. Fowler, whose address is to be the feature of the convention, said:

"I believe the Chicago Bankers' club committee is going to solve the currency question to the satisfaction of the country. This committee is now assured the active co-operation and support of the great states of Illinois and Iowa. I think the Wisconsin bankers will fall into line at their convention."

"Sentiment all through the west is developing in favor of asset currency that will contract as well as expand. In Wall street they would like inflation. They want more money to aid them in boosting up prices again. It is in Wall street that the Aldrich bill meets with favor and that a credit currency, which has the faculty of contracting when the crop moving season is over, is not liked at all."

ITALIANS MAY ELECT OUTSIDER

FACTIONS LIKELY TO UNITE

Despite Differences, the Native Cardinals Are Almost Sure to Vote for One of Their Countrymen to Fill the Pontiff's Chair.

Rome, July 29.—With the conclave that will select the successor to Pope Leo XIII almost at the eve of that important work, some surprising changes have been wrought in the situation at the Vatican. At this time Rome is in a state of great expectancy, and what Friday will bring forth is just now the absorbing topic here, as, indeed, it must be throughout the whole Catholic world.

The development of immediate interest is that Pope Leo's successor may not, after all, be an Italian—the possibility that he may not is met with calm denials from the Italians, but that there is a possibility is shown from the politics that persistently injects itself into all discussions. That the Italian cardinals, who form an overwhelming majority in the sacred college, will do their best to give the office to a countryman there is no doubt. But so much bitterness—and herein lies the significance of the rumors that are heard about Rome—has developed in the contest between the Rampolla-Gotti faction and its opposers that the latter are plainly threatening, if too hard pressed, to throw their support to a foreigner.

Outsiders Are Mentioned.
 Cardinal Gibbons' name has naturally been mentioned in connection with these rumors. The contingency is not likely to arise, it is true. Still, it is a possibility, and the fact that it exists has had the result of greatly increasing the keen interest felt in the only American representative in the congregation.

Cardinal Kopp, bishop of Breslau, has also been spoken of as a possible candidate, should the struggle between the Rampolla and anti-Rampolla parties prove strong enough to give the victory to any but an Italian. It is hardly likely, however, that the German could be successful in any event, inasmuch as the elevation to the papal throne might mean the irreparable loss of France to the holy see.

Rampolla and Gotti.
 It is an open secret that the supporters of Cardinals Rampolla and Gotti will vote for their respective candidates on the first ballot, after which the one who leads in the vote will receive the united support of both parties.

The college as a whole is fast dividing for and against Rampolla.

There are, however, three classes, Cardinal Rampolla's direct supporters, those who will vote with him, but not for him, and those who will vote against him and his policy.

His supporters argue that he is the best man to continue Leo's policy. His opponents urge that the outgoing administration sought to ingratiate the papacy with governments, not with peoples. Hence, when the French government showed its teeth the church did not have the French people back of it. The cardinals who argue thus, including the supporters of Cardinal Vannutelli, agreed with Cardinal Gibbons that the church will be strongest when it is absolutely independent of all political powers.

Slights Oreglia.
 The anti-Rampolla party is divided in supporting Cardinals Vannutelli, Oreglia and Agliardi. Should the contest become strenuous, it is probable that some neutral candidate like Di Pietro, Sarto, Satolli, Svampa, or Ferreri will finally be selected. It is in the event of a failure to unite or to elect any of these that an attempt may be made to give the tiara to a foreign cardinal.

Yesterday's congregation was marked by two incidents. Cardinal Richelmy, Archbishop of Turin, attended for the first time. When he entered he went directly to Cardinal Rampolla, conversed with him for some moments and then took his seat. Cardinal Oreglia called him to the desk and gently chided him for not greeting the president on his arrival. Cardinal Richelmy apologized and the two cardinals cordially embraced.

Another of the cardinals stated that he had first learned the terms of Leo's will from the newspapers, and he protested against this. Cardinal Oreglia replied that it was the fault of the executors, one of the latter explaining that it was considered a private matter. The objecting cardinal responded that, as the sacred college had inherited the whole property, it would have been more fitting if the heirs had been informed before the newspapers.

Cardinals Meet.
 Yesterday's meeting of the congregation of cardinals was very short. After an exchange of views on current affairs, Monsignore Merry del Val, secretary of the consistorial congregation, gave each cardinal a diagram showing where his apartment in the Vatican will be located during the conclave.

Cable Lasts Long.
 A section of cable in the Caribbean sea was recently raised from 1,350 fathoms of water, where it had lain for thirty years. Tests showed its core to be in perfect electrical condition and the rubber insulator uninjured. A fear that sulphur from the rubber might injure the copper wire had no foundation.
